

'But for my part, there is nothing I hold more strongly, or have more frequently endeavoured to impress on the colonists, than that the future, not the present, should be the measure of their aims and responsibilities, that they are the fathers of a great nation, and that the destinies of the ages hang to a great extent on their acts ...'

John Godley

An excerpt from a speech in reference to Christchurch and Canterbury

Destination
BEVERLEY SHORE